

NEW YORK ROOF GARDEN LID ON

But the Show Starts Off at a Lively Pace with the Wayburn Girls and Some Good Vaudeville Features.

Somewhat or other the weather seems to change its mind the minute a roof garden opens, and that's why the lid was on the New York Theatre roof last night. It reminded one of Jerome and the proverb that people who live in glass houses should not use axes.

There is no disposition on our part to use either axe or hammer on the New York roof show, but the fact remains that Ned Wayburn's "Minstrel Brides" of a season ago set a pace which "Ned Wayburn's Girls," "Ned Wayburn's Dingles," "Ned Wayburn's Rag Sextette" and Ned Wayburn's other carefully copyrighted novelties can't quite keep.

Again the Wayburn Girls, supplemented by a string of colored boys who sing off the key, prove themselves the cleverest of their kind in the minstrel Walburness of things, and they sing and jig until one might doubt their color, if they didn't scrub it off in full view of the audience.

If there is a fault to be found, it is that there is too much "coon" and not enough minstrel mimes. This season's show doesn't catch the crowd as last summer's did. The only really new feature is Mr. Wayburn's "rag" sextet; but why he should let these syncopated pounders of the piano take it out on "The Holy City" and Mendelssohn's Wedding March is above roof garden understanding.

What the whole Wayburn part of the programme needs—more than a copyright—is more life and swing.

Helen's Royal Band can at least make money and its leader is the most emotional and amusing since Creators.

Good vaudeville features are Rosa Nannon's Tropical Birds; Herbert Brooks and his magic trunk; Max Waldron, a perfect lady of the female impersonator; the Metzett family of acrobats; and Gillette's Musical Dogs. To tell the truth, these acts come perilously near stealing Wayburn's copyrighted thunder.

YOUNG ARTIST SHE SAYS ANNOYED HER

Frank Moll Arrested in Long Island City on Complaint of 17-Year-Old Girl—Discharged With a Warning.

Frank Moll, a young artist of No. 340 Manhattan avenue, this borough, was prisoner in the Long Island City Police Court to-day charged with annoying Mamie Dosky, a pretty seventeen-year-old girl of No. 163 Third street, Long Island City.

The Dosky girl told Magistrate Connorton that she formerly lived near Moll in this borough, and that she moved to Long Island City because his attentions were offensive to her. He learned where she had gone, she said, and followed her. For weeks, she said, he had been sitting on her front door step and otherwise annoying her. Last night he followed her and two friends on a Vernon avenue car, got off when they did and tried to speak to her. She called Policeman Dubois and had him arrested. A friend bailed Moll out last night.

Magistrate Connorton lectured Moll severely for his conduct. The young man denied that he had any special affection for the Dosky girl, but said that some time ago he wrote some letters to her and was now desirous of getting them back. For that purpose he had spoken to her, and that only. He was discharged with a warning to let the girl alone.

TWO JAPS WERE BADLY BATTERED

Policeman Steinway Says He Only Tapped Them with His Club, but He Will Be Arrested for Assault.

Sute Sumo and Phone Furo, two Japs were arraigned in the Coney Island Police Court to-day charged with disorderly conduct. Both looked as if they had inadvertently stepped on a Russian mine. The surgeon who dressed Sumo's wounds and bruises used fifty yards of bandages. Phone Furo was done up in ten yards and both were so weak they had to be propped against the rail.

Policeman Steinway, who made the arrest, said they were creating a disturbance on Surf avenue. He said they resisted arrest and he had tapped them with his club to make them submit. Morris Davonport, a Flatbush lawyer, declared to the Court that Steinway had beaten the Japs without mercy, using his club and the butt of his revolver. The corroborating evidence so impressed the Magistrate that he issued a warrant for the policeman on a charge of assault. He will be arraigned to-morrow.

DIED WHILE SHE PRAYED.
(Special to The Evening World.)
CAMDEN, N. J., June 14.—Letitia Dimes, ninety years old, of Gloucester City, knelt in prayer to-day. Some time during her daughter, going to her side, found her dead. She had been praying for a long time.

ROSE STAHL, WHO MADE A HIT IN "THE CHORUS GIRL" AT PROCTORS.

GIRL IMMIGRANTS LOST IN NEW YORK

Lured by Cheap Rates, They Came to America and Were Swindled—Now Ask to Be Sent Back.

Two girls who arrived on the Kronland last Sunday, and who say that they were induced to come here because of the cheap rate, returned to Ellis Island to-day and asked to be sent back to Antwerp.

They are Bodor Ilka and Maria Rogosh, each nineteen years old. They had between two and three dollars when they arrived and were going to the Ilka girl's brother, who lives somewhere in the Bronx. The brother telegraphed to have both girls sent to him, and they were allowed to land.

Being unable to find the brother they asked a stranger where they could find an employment bureau. The man offered to direct them if they would pay him $2. They gave him the money and he put them on a car which took them out in the country somewhere near New Rochelle, as far as can be ascertained. There they found the address given them was fictitious.

Their money nearly all gone, they wandered around all day Monday and finally were directed back to Ellis Island, where they asked to be sent home. They have lost the Ilka girl's brother's address and it is a question what is to become of them. The steamship company cannot be compelled to take them back and there is no provision by which they can be sent back at government expense.

PEWITT'S FACE CAUGHT AUDIENCE

Expressed All Sorts of Emotions and Caught Last Night's Visitors to Hammerstein's Roof Garden.

Pewitt, the much heralded wonder face, made its first appearance at Hammerstein's Roof Garden last night, and for ten minutes kept a wondering audience guessing whether its presentation of differing human expressions was the work of a real man or a marvellously constructed machine.

In the contest in face-making between a real and extremely Gallic Pierre and Pewitt the latter had much the best of it, portraying the varying emotions of deceit, cunning, irony, contempt, inspiration, idiosyncrasy, love, kisses, the mother-in-law, &c., with amazing realism. He laughed, shed tears, winked, did everything that the most human impersonator could do, and is a veritable triumph of mechanism.

The audience took Pewitt's faces good-humoredly, and even when his expressive visage showed the utmost contempt for them applauded him with enthusiasm.

"THE CHORUS GIRL" IS REALLY CLEVER

More than ordinarily clever is "The Chorus Girl," which James Forbes took an hour off to write, and which was capably acted, so far as Rose Stahl was concerned, at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre yesterday afternoon for the first time.

To make the acquaintance of "The Chorus Girl" is well worth a trip off the beaten path—otherwise Broadway—and it really takes Broadwayers to thoroughly appreciate the trifle, notwithstanding the sketch has been so widely over the head of any one. "The Chorus Girl" amuses truly of the stage—the "stage" which comes in and goes out the stage door—and it is almost a little work of art.

Its slinky, staid humor veritably bites, and Miss Stahl nips it off so nicely that nothing goes waste. Mr. Forbes made only one mistake, and that was in putting his chorus lady in a dressing room of the Metropolitan Opera House. He could have found much more suitable places right in the neighborhood.

"FIGHTING BOB" WENT WELL

"Fighting Bob" led the strenuous life for the first time on a New York stage last night at Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre, and S. Miller Kent, of "The Cowboy and the Lady," "road" fame, settled a few combative little riffs, such as adjusting revolutions in Central America, killing crown princes and mowing duped princesses.

The cows and the boys were absent, but Mr. Miller's reputation was saved by the sombrero and chappero; so he looked at home.

"Fighting Bob" was from Colorado, and he performed so many startling feats at arms as to make James K. Hackett, who coupled a box with his wife, Mary Manning, awaiting W. H. Thompson's appearance in far the most progressive sign of the enterprise of the stage was the immortalizing of Hannah Elias and poor old John R. Platt in a topical song which brought down the house.

Sale Price 12c
A sale to parallel this one occurred but once before in the history of Macy's. It was a special occasion calculated to linger pleasantly in the memory of every mother who attended it and bought the lot's supplies at a record low price. To-day the news is none the less interesting. The goods come from one of the country's largest importers, who sacrificed them for half and less than half, only after a prolonged wait for settled weather. In this lot are plain white lisle thread Socks, plain white with hair-line stripes of pink, blue and red; plain white cotton with hand-embroidered figures in pink, blue and red; English cashmere three-quarter Hose in plain white and black; cashmere Socks in plain black, tan, pink and red, and plain black cotton—in addition to many others, in lots too small to warrant detail. Sizes range from 4 to 7 1/2. Values—unmatched.
